The Florida Association of Educational Data Systems (FAEDS)

*Florida's Oldest Professional Association
founded in 1963 (formerly chartered in 1964)*

I. A Brief History

FAEDS is a K-20 professional educational association made up of practicing information systems and computer system specialists, and vendors in support of school district, community college, and university operations and functions. FAEDS members join together in order to network, plan activities, and encourage best practices for the mutual benefit of all those who practice and provide leadership for these professions throughout Florida.

Founded in 1963, when 14 counties planning on utilizing centralized data processing met in Tallahassee. They recognized the need for a data processing association and submitted an application for a state charter. Thomas D. Bailey (Tallahassee) is credited with the initial idea. Officially, the State association was formerly chartered in 1964 and signed by Myron Ashmore (Fort Lauderdale), Thomas Bailey, William English (Fort Lauderdale), Henry Fox (Miami), Robert Gates (Tallahassee), William McFatter (Fort Lauderdale), John Phillips (Clearwater), Robert Sims (Tallahassee), Thomas Smith (Titusville), and Gerald Wilson (Tampa). William J. English was elected the first president of the new organization.

FAEDS is the oldest Florida professional association dedicated to the advancement of educational technology. FAEDS originally was a state-level organization off the parent organization, the National Association of Educational Data Systems (AEDS), and there was a joint FAEDS-AEDS conference in 1969. A FAEDS member, Dr. Everitt Yarborough (Tallahassee), served as national association president that year.

In 1979 FAEDS began the tradition of an annual fall conference – which has continued since that time (over 35 years).

FAEDS began a close working relationship with the Florida Educational Computing Network (FECN) which was the precursor to the Florida Information Resource Network (FIRN). This was a key working relationship in that – through FAEDS - all school districts had direct input in statewide Internet and website hosting planning, and policies. In June, 2007 website hosting for the all K-12 schools was officially transferred from FLDOE to FIRN.

FAEDS has always maintained it's focus on meeting educational information systems and technology needs in all Florida schools: K-12, colleges, and universities. While the association membership included local and national vendor representatives, technology experts, and the State Department staff, the association mission has been directed and governed by in-field representatives via a Board of Directors. The Directors oversee the membership, policies, annual conferences, workshops, position papers, and monitor legislative mandates and maintain association communications on data system issues.

2. To bring together, for their mutual benefit, both operational and professional specialists concerned with educational information technologies and systems and representatives from manufacturing and service companies;
3. To provide for sharing and exchanging ideas, techniques, materials and procedures among educational groups currently using or planning to use various information technologies and systems;
4. To promote general recognition of the vital role of the educational information technology specialists in supporting schools, colleges and universities and of the high level of competence required for this role;
5. To facilitate, at local and state levels, communication and cooperation among educational entities, agencies, organizations, professions, and the public regarding the purpose and use of information technologies and systems;
6. To stimulate the development of adequate programs of instruction by those responsible for the professional training of educators, information technology specialists and instructors;
7. To provide leadership in the efficient management of educational data, recognizing the need for appropriate ethical standards, and compatible data requirements;
8. To identify areas of concern and inform the appropriate entities of special studies which may be indicated; and
9. To work with the public and private sector distributors of information technologies in establishing and maintaining proper technical standards and in meeting new requirements in hardware and software.

One of the prominent functions of FAEDS is the recognition provided colleagues and state leaders in the field of educational information and computing. These awards are made annually and include:

- The Robert E. Sims, Memorial Award to Outstanding Service;
- Honorary Lifetime Memberships;
- The Raymond Parker Award;
- The William J. English Award;
- The Computer Teacher of the Year Award; and
- The Jack Kelley Outstanding Technology Award.

Over the fifty plus years of the association, the FAEDS organization and membership have been very involved in the design and implementation of some of the more significant statewide advancements in the areas of educational technology and information systems:

- In the early 70's Florida became one of the first states to design and develop a uniform statewide data collection and reporting system for all student, instructional, staff, and operational systems.
- The Florida Information Resources Network (FIRN) provided the networking infrastructure, policies and guidelines for both school and Internet communications.
- The Florida Distance Learning project provided the guidance and groundwork for wireless education.
- The SSAT, FAIR and PMRN statewide assessment projects - which were the predecessors to the statewide online assessments (RTTT);
- The Sunshine Connections project which advanced statewide interoperable user identification and security for exceptional and regular student analytic systems.
- The statewide Race to the Top projects (2009-2015) which raised core standards and provided extensive online interactive support for educational school and program administrators, teachers, students, and parents(CPALMS).

*Florida's Oldest Professional Association

- In the past ten years, FAEDS has served a much more critical role in promoting shared understanding and practical solutions in response to an explosive increase in new technologies, implementation and security issues, new mandates, and ever increasing funding shortages. FAEDS has become an essential communication, training, and planning vehicle for K-20 educational technology, as reflected in such annual themes as: “Optimizing Resources to meet Florida’s Education Challenges (2009),” “Are you ready?! Technology options to meet the Explosion of Florida K-20 Education Requirements” (2010), “E-TextBook Mobile Devices & Social Media Cloud Computing” (2012).

FAEDS continues as a self-governing body in providing the leadership and support for all those involved in the advancement of educational data systems and technology in Florida, and remains an outstanding professional association example nationally.

VI. FAEDS ARCHIVE MATERIALS & PAPERS

Not included in this hard copy book, is a series of appendices which include:

- A PowerPoint "Brief History of FAEDS" for use in general sessions, displays, and as background for new members or associates;
- significant historical items (e.g. Charter and Incorporation documents),
- photos, labeled and otherwise sorted by year;
- Board and General Meeting Agendas and Minutes;
- Conference Programs;
- Special Papers & Research Topics;
- Position Papers....

These records are HUGE (45+ Gigs) and are located with the FAEDS Historian, President, and are on file with the FAEDS Accountant, Jim Wadsworth, Tallahassee, Florida.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR CONTINUING MAINTENANCE AND UPDATES are included in the initial listing of CONTENTS on Page 1 of this document.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS:

This FAEDS History Book is a comprehensive update of all association business and significant events. What is collected herein only exists because of the efforts of many earlier historians.

Among those who have contributed significant history updates, is the work done by Mary Ester Raker and Annette Barwick (pictured to the left, 1982), and Marie Dence (1989-90).

Many individual members have contributed special projects, research papers, and position papers on behalf of FAEDS members. One of these, Allan Pither (U of F, NERDC), author of the FAEDS PR Process paper is pictured below with Al LeDuc and Martha Fields (FLDOE).

The Florida Association of Educational Data Systems (FAEDS)

*Florida's Oldest Professional Association
founded in 1963 (formerly chartered in 1964)*

Significant electronically archived materials were contributed by Bill White (Valencia College), David Jasa (Escambia), John Oppen (Distance Learning Consortium), Bill Nimmons & Bill Piotrowski (Leon), and James Wadsworth (who provides the FAEDS association accounting services).

The documents, photos, statistics, and materials in this collection were consolidated and updated as of August, 2014. This work was accomplished through a stipend from the FAEDS Board, at the initiative of the 2014 FAEDS Historian Bill Nimmons (Leon). Bill Piotrowski (Past-President and Historian) was the contractor for this project.

Continuing input is needed for maintaining and adding/correcting/editing the information, documents, and photos (with labels) included in this report – both hardcopy and electronic. These contents and organization scheme provide a structure for more easily incorporating updates and expansions. Input, ideas, and further work are encouraged and needed given some gaps or inconsistencies that have occurred over the past 50+ years.

The association can enjoy and benefit more from these materials being maintained and readily accessible. Specific recommendations for assigning tasks that can provide annual updates resulting in these items being maintained more consistently and in a more organized manner are included in the CONTENTS listing on the first page of the FAEDS History Book.

Please forward your input, ideas, and additions to the current FAEDS Historian or FAEDS President (see website for specific contact information: www.faeds.org )

Thank you for your interest and support in these activities,

William "Bill" Piotrowski & William Nimmons, 2014 FAEDS Historians
